

CLIL konferencijos dalyvių įspūdžiai (kalba netaisyta):

Maria's feedback (Form 8):

The CLIL conference was a huge challenge for me and for all of us. I started working from the first day, started to look for information, and I understood that I had to do this project as catchy and interesting as I can. During the speech I didn't miss anything, so I think that I did everything what I could. The conference itself was very useful, because I found out a lot of interesting things from other presentations. I learned how to present everything in front of the class. I think that teacher wanted us to talk more so it's very good method to encourage us.

Meda's feedback (form 8):

The conference started at around 8o'clock and I already felt that everyone's hearts were beating faster, mine as well. I hoped not to be first, because I was afraid to do too many mistakes. But sadly, my hopes were pointless and I HAD to go first. When I came to the "stage", I felt every single part of my body shaking, and at the same time I didn't think about anything. I missed some things I wanted to say, but it was not as bad as I thought it will be.

I watched all my classmates doing a great job. I really liked Maria's presentation, because it was full of everything, informative, and interesting to listen. I also liked other presentations and tried to support everyone in my mind.

The audience was quiet and not really active at asking questions, but they still were helping if we forgot any words.

I think that the conference came out pretty well, and definitely not worse than the 9th graders'.

Daniel's feedback (form 8):

Well to start, I'll describe my own work. It was too rushed, a last minute project you could say. I improvised a lot by using my research instead of having a planned out speech, which many of my classmates had. My main third wheel were the sides. They kept me on the topic for most of the time. But even the slides weren't perfect, since they were missing some key parts.

The conference itself was interesting, because (insert reasons later). Jokes aside, most of the conference wasn't catchy. The only exceptions I can remember are Marija's and Arminas' speeches. They had something that could be attractive to the eye, be it an unexpected greeting or bravery of showing themselves through pre-recorded footage.

Was the conference useful? No. Why? Because most of the information given were general truths and things we come across everyday on the Internet. But that doesn't mean I didn't learn anything new. In fact, now I know how the massive coffee cup usage issue is being treated over at England and how big of a danger littering is in terms of fire starting.

Anyways, all of the speakers did a great job and our speeches surely gave the 9th graders something to think about.

Kajetonas's feedback (form 8):

Before that conference I was really scared. I was scared, because I was thinking that I'm gonna do a big mistake or some small mistakes. However, when I started to talk I was thinking just about my talk, about my presentation. I think that I made some mistakes in my speech but now I'm not so scared like at that time and I think that I've done pretty good job. I like my classmates presentations. It was very funny to listen Maksimas's speech, because there were some jokes. Arminas had some of them too. Maria's presentation and her work was very interesting and I saw that she's done the biggest job. I like to listen all of my classmates presentations and now I know some interesting things. Like there is a special bin for Coffee cups in some places. There is a tire landfill in Kėdainiai. So, I think that all done pretty good job and that conference is really successful and I want to have more of these lessons.

Edmundas's feedback (form 8):

This conference was a real challenge for us (8th formers) and for 9 formers as well. I think all of us felt nervous and scared at that time, but later everyone felt free and relaxed. I think everyone did their presentations and speeches really good and interesting (but still, maybe some of them and us could do it better, just a little). Speaking about me, I really liked everyone's presentations and speeches of our class and 9 formers. Well... for me everything was really good and interesting to listen and learn something new.

Karolina (form IG)

The conference was a real challenge. It was a real step forward. Knowing our mistakes I think we will certainly learn from them. it's just a first time. Comparing the eighth class with us, in my opinion they were a bit better. The topics really were relevant to the problems of this time but I think their subjects have not been told in detail. Their English was so clean that sometimes I thought I was a foreigner in the meeting. Well, excitement made it own. Some of the presentations could have a little more information both in the speech and on the slides. In the future I think it will be easier for everyone. It will be easier to stand in front of the audience. Thank you teacher for such a huge step forward.

Jovita (form IG):

8th form did their presentations well. Their chosen topics weren't very wide like ours (9th form) and it was really very interesting to listen because their English was clean and they used wide vocabulary. On the other hand, some of them didn't mention information about situation in Lithuania and how to solve a problem. It was first time for them and for us :) to give public speeches. I think that now they did great their speech but in the future they will make it much better.

Simona (form IG):

I really liked this conference. The eight graders did a pretty good job and I really liked their topics, because they weren't very wide. Some of the pupils could have done their homework better, because most of them haven't mentioned solutions and situation in Lithuania, but there's always a place to improve, even when I remember that they are eight graders and we're from the 9th form. I think that they did better than us, and I hope there will be more conferences like this in the future.

Orestas (Form IG):

Our school organized a conference on environment issues. 8th and 9th form pupils presented problematic topics such as: air, water, soil pollution. Most of the presenters clearly stated problems and provided solutions. They described current situation in Lithuania. The presentations were interesting and informative. The speakers presented unusual facts. It was really useful and I enjoyed it!

Faustas (Form IG):

Over the last two months 8th and 9th classes had two conferences. In the conferences both classes were presenting topics of environmental and social problems, suggesting problem solutions and telling the audience how bad the situation in Lithuania is.

Majority of the pupils did their homework: explained everything so everyone could understand the content of the speech but most of them were really afraid to speak in front of the audience and this is the thing which caused the speeches being not perfect.

However, there were some people who did the presentation not as it is supposed to be or didn't put a lot of effort into the research or the presentation itself and presented the audience the general information that most of us would already know.

After all, the 8th class did better than 9th at presenting the topics.

Karina (form IG):

I'm from the 9th form. A Session of conference started our class. We had two months to prepare for our conference. We all did the research and after research we gave our speech. To search for information and do my speech was the easiest things in my preparation. The worst thing every time when I do the speech is to learn it and this time was not an excuse.

When I was standing in front of audience, I was very nervous, my knees and hands were shaking, but after it I was so happy, that I made my task.

Some time later 8th form organised their conference. There we, audience, needed to ask questions and fill the tables. It was a little bit difficult for me but I think I made it.

This conference was a new experience, next time, I think, our class and 8th form will do better because now we know how to do it. It was so interesting, new and unusual so why don't other classes do it, too?
